TENTS

Trail series

The TRAIL tent series is designed to have the poles attach directly to the tent canopy. After setting it up it is necessary to attach the flysheet to the tent rack. This option gives an opportunity to use the canopy only as a mosquito net during warm summer nights.

A big advantage of this series are the two entrances on both sides of the tent, providing an quick and easy entry/exit. They're also very convenient for ventilating the tent during hot summer days. Two vestibules give additional storage space.

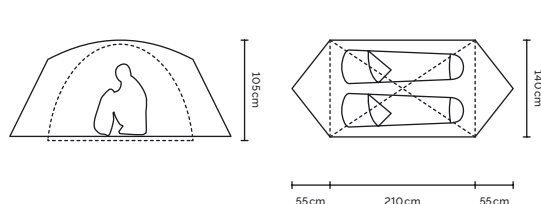

TRAIL series tents are well known for their light-weight structure which is so important during travelling.

FITTING INSTRUCTIONS

Follow these steps to properly fit your backpack:

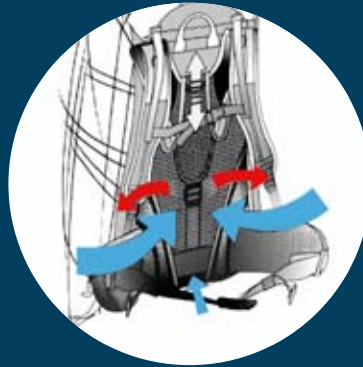

1. Measure your torso length and select the proper sized backpack
2. Fill your backpack with 20 to 30 pounds of gear, ideally with a sleeping bag in the bottom and some weight on top. Tighten the load compression straps to stabilize the load. Put the backpack on and tighten the waist belt.
3. Lift your leg until your thigh is a 90- degree angle to your body. The bottom edge of the waist belt should be level with the top of your thigh.
4. Make sure the shoulder stabilizer straps are loose. The curve in the shoulder harness should be level with your armpit.
5. Lightly tense the shoulder harness adjustment straps.
6. Pulling on the shoulder stabilizer straps should lift off the shoulder straps at a 10-degree to 45-degree angle from horizontal. If the angle is less than 10-degrees, move the stabilizer straps to the higher buckle. If the angle is greater than 45-degrees, move it to the lower buckle.
